In the State of Ohio a minister could legally solemnize marriage rites if he held the proper license. Until the year 1852 licenses were issued by the Court of Common Pleas in any county. After that date they were granted by the Probate Court. An applicant had to show certain credentials from his church body before a license would be given to him. The license was valid only in the county where issued, but could be made valid in any other county after being recorded in it.
